

ABSTRACT

Light is incident on a semiconductor wafer polish surface and an adjacent reference surface (80). The reflected light from each surface is detected by a detector (35) positioned 5 beneath the surfaces. The signals derived from each source of reflected light is analyzed in a electronic system (37) and an endpoint for a chemical mechanical polish process is determined as a function of both signals.